SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE COMMITTEE

SUGGESTION NO. 75-96: dated 5 September 1974

STATINTL

[REDACTED] GS-12
Night Foreman Offset Stripper
Directorate of Science and Technology/NPIC

A. Summary of Suggestion

1. Background

The NPIC Photo Lab used .007 base litho film for their negative requirements.

2. Suggestion

Use a .004 base litho film. The quality of the negatives would not change and the photo lab would realize a savings in film costs.

B. Evaluation

1. NPIC originally declined the suggestion in January 1975 stating that by using .004 mil film there would be a decrease in the initial costs; however, there would be a sacrifice in quality and time. The photo lab anticipated more remakes and down time due to film buckling and film curling.

2. The suggester resubmitted his proposal in February 1975 requesting reconsideration and pointing out that there would be no loss in quality and time. The film emulsion is the same for .004 as .007 and the base is as stable. The thinner base film is being used by Printing and Photography Division; they have not experienced any loss of quality or stability.

INTERNAL USE ONLY

STATINTL

3. NPIC's Photo Lab began using .004 base litho film for their negative requirements. When the suggestion was initially evaluated the photo lab was servicing frequent requests which called for the use of a particular film which had a base thickness of .010 inches. The processor in use could not be adjusted to handle both .010 inch base film and .004 inch base film. The lab no longer has a requirement for the .010 base film. In addition, the photo lab has a new model processor capable of handling the thinner base film without difficulty.

4. NPIC has ordered a year's supply of the .004 film. First-year savings are $5,435 (detailed description of savings attached). P&PD said that they had been using .004 film for over 15 years with no problems. They believe that the conclusions and recommendations of NPIC relative to adoption of this suggestion are valid.

C. Recommendation of Executive Secretary

1. Not line of duty. [] is an offset stripper in the Lithographic Services Branch and is not responsible for processes in the NPIC Photo Lab.

2. $325 award based on annual savings of $5,435.
